

Small Chinese characters arranged in a grid pattern, likely a data table or a list of names. The characters are small and densely packed, typical of a microfilm or a high-resolution scan of a document. The grid is approximately 50 columns wide and 800 rows high, with some missing or faded characters in certain areas.

Main body of the document containing a dense grid of small text characters, likely a character frequency or index table. The text is organized in a grid-like structure with multiple columns and rows of small characters.

Bottom section of the document containing additional text, possibly a continuation of the index or a list of related items. It includes various characters and symbols arranged in a structured format.

